AWEC's ability to swiftly adjust its strategies to meet the urgent needs of the Afghan people is commendable.

Despite the political changes that unfolded in Afghanistan in 2021, leading to an exodus of many organizations from the country, AWEC demonstrated extraordinary resilience. While several professional staff members chose to leave due to the heightened risks, AWEC valiantly continued its operations, determined to stand by the Afghan people in their time of need. The suspension of US-funded projects and lack of funding in the initial months further tested the organization's mettle, but AWEC refused to falter, seeking alternative avenues to sustain its vital work.

The closure of bank accounts for all Afghans in the early months of 2021 presented considerable obstacles, hindering the organization's financial transactions and day-to-day operations. “I can follow my dreams now”

Shamasullah Peerkoti

“I joined AWEC konkor preparation class for the university entry Test. I was extremely enthusiastic about going to university and becoming a doctor, but for not having good economic conditions I was not able to participate in the preparation classes. But AWEC provided us kankor preparation classes in our district which allowed us to participate in the program Most of our people are illiterate in our district people face many challenges in their lives ahead. Whether I become a doctor I will do my best to support my people as a doctor and help them have better medical conditions. There are very few numbers of Kankor preparation classes for youth in our city but these facilities are not available for people in districts If we have such a program for new high school graduates that gives our people a chance to succeed in kankor and become the person they want in their life so I really thank Afghan women education center for providing such opportunities for us.

"Moment, I felt proud of serving my people in crisis"

"I used to be a vaccinator and it was part of my job to travel to rural districts that were insecure Places. Our mission was to vaccinate children in Soishan district, but as we arrived, we were threatened by the different people and head of the village told us to leave the district as soon as we can. Because false rumors were spread, that we are injecting some sort of chemicals to people in order to change their minds and that it was planned by the Afghan government to provoke people to fight the Government. It wasn't the first time we were facing disapproval, so we asked the elders to arrange a meeting with the authorities and give a chance to explain about the vaccine and if we couldn't convince them we will leave without vaccinating a single child in the village. I was selected to participate on behalf of our vaccine group in the meeting with the governing authorities. At the beginning, they stated their reasons of disapproval with severe anger regarding vaccine and shared how this vaccine is designed by the government to change people's mind about the Taliban. Finally, when I was asked to talk about the issue, I explained our main purpose behind vaccinating the children and briefly talked about the Polio disease which has not just affected children in Afghanistan but worldwide. In addition, I talked about the disadvantages of not vaccinating children on time and the damages it can cause in the long run. I also tried to prove my points through some of the live examples within the village, especially children affected by Polio. After having the discussion about Polio and why this vaccine is essential for every single child, they agreed and allowed us to vaccine children. that moment I felt proud of my job and found more enthusiasm toward my job"

Project coordination with stakeholders

Center (AWEC). During this period, the Afghan government had some political changes, leading to significant changes in administrative procedures and regulations. Many donors and international organizations decided to leave the country, leaving Afghans in a political and economic diaspora. AWEC made efforts to rebuild relations with donors and stakeholders and engage with the current authorities to sign Memorandums of Understanding (MOUs) and gain approval for project registrations. In 2021 and 2022, AWEC signed MOUs with more than eight ministries, including the Ministry of Tribal Affairs, Ministry of Education, Afghanistan National Disaster Management Authority, Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs, Ministry of Borders and Tribal Affairs, Ministry of Public Health, and Ministry of Economy.

However, the current IEA implemented restrictive measures, including changes to NGO laws and additional regulations that made it challenging to sign MOUs and register projects. These interferences increased significantly in 2022, but AWEC managed to navigate the situation by maintaining good relations and understanding the evolving context. Following political changes in the country, a considerable number of donors and non-profit organizations decided to leave Afghanistan due to restrictions. Many civil society organizations that previously collaborated with the government also departed due to the life-threatening situation in the country. Additionally, the Taliban's actions towards NGOs, including AWEC, caused further concern, leading some international organizations to pause their activities out of respect. As a result, AWEC saw a significant decrease in stakeholders, partners, and donors.

Despite facing one of the most challenging phases in its history during these two years, AWEC remained committed to its objectives and supporting vulnerable Afghan people, particularly women and girls. The organization re-established coordination with donors and stakeholders by actively involving them, communicating effectively, managing expectations, and fostering collaboration to achieve desired outcomes. While not all goals were met, the achievements made were valuable given the ongoing circumstances.
